SATURDAY MOR'G, Aug. 21, 1858.

The Great Cable. The successful laying of the Atlantic Telegraph cable, if taken in connexion with the transmission of the messages already accomplished, must forever mark an era in the aumale of human history. The event is one of such magnitude, in its details and probable consequences, so unomalous and peculine in comparison with any thing in the previous history of our race, that the mind does not at first adequately (grash it-does not rise to any thing like a realizing sense of the great achievemeat. It is like some great work of actsome exquisite piece of sculpture some world-renowned azinting, or triumph of acchitecture ; it will not only bear to be studiet', but you will be greatly the loter if you fail. to study it. The mere fact that you will have seen it, is nothing; but if you take the time, and if you have the eye, taste and heart to appreciate it you will be richly paid

We do not know-for no man can know, to a certainty-that the Ocean magnetic cable which has just been laid, and whose infant and innerfect atterances, have so thrilled and delighted the world-we do not know that this particular cord will long remain unbroken, nor indeed, if it does, that it will perform, with promptness and accuracy, all that has been expected of it. The tedious and harrassing delays experienced by the operators at Trinity Bay, in getting the Queen's message—the cruel totch-work finally made in sending only the first para-Braph, and leaving the public to infer that it was either the work of a royal noodle or else an arrast and stopid humbag, altogetherthe worden-headed neglect, on the part of somebody, (we know not who) to affix either date or signature to Her Majesty's dispatch -these things imply either great and unforeseen obtacles, or a degree of stupidity and headlereness on the part of agents and operators, that would be less provoking in a smallor sphere.

But one thing, one great and mighty fact has been demonstrated-stands out in hold relief before the world. Far for across the wild expanse of the ocean waste-amid all the raging turnsoil of waves and storms-the imumerable peoples of the Eastern and Western Hemisphere can speak to each other, hear each other's words, and reply ! -can do this almost as if they stood face to face and grasped each others' hands! The full effect that must ultimately result from this demonstration it is quite too enrig to anticipate; but it must be grand, far reaching, and weardently hope in the highest degree be effect and usoful to our race.

The failure of the present cable, or of forty cables, will not be suffired to prevent telegraphic communition with Europe. The thing is now seen to be practicable; its ime is great and pressing, and Luman ingernity and enterprise will continue an I perfect the operation. And if Europe and America can thus be united, what is to prevent the extension of the telegraphic wires to every part of the habitable globe? The child is already born, and has doubtless at tained a goodly size, who is destined to see the magnetic cord ourirely this small planet and to hold converse with the antipodesthe men who, in Cambodia and Cochin China, stand with their feet opposite to ours

D' Oliver Ditson & Ca of Boston, have published the following music:

Courageons Woman,

The following account of the courageous council of a young lady has been communicated ted to a New Jersey paper: A Mr. M., whose health was found to be impaired by the health was found to be impaired by the climate of the scaboard, was induced to re-move from the city of New York to the interior of Illinois, his family consisting of his wife and three children, the oldest a young lady of seventren summers, and the youngest some three years. Early last spring, a maiden lade, a particular friend of the family, and very much attached to Mrs. M. and her children, removed from New York and took up her abode with them. She had not been leng in her new home before she was suddenly taken away by death. While Mr. and Mrs. M. were at-tending the funeral of Miss W., Miss M. was left in charge of the house and the young child, and the room containing the effects of the late Miss W., which was situaredon the second story of the house, was locked by the young lady and the child put to sleep in an adjoining room, while Miss M, was busying herself with her duties below. Some time afterward. Miss M., hear ing a noise upstairs, and suposing the child had awake, proceeded to look after it, but tound it sheeping quietly. With a thought as quick as electricity, she concluded that some one had entered Miss. W.'s room some one had entered Miss W.s town from the outside for the purpose of relying it.—Acting on this theory, she immediately went down stairs, procured her father's double-barrel'ed gun, and returning, opened the door, of the room of the late Miss W., the door, of the room of the late Miss when her expectations were fully realized in beholding a stout man in the very act of appropriating a gold watch and chain, which he had just taken from a trunk of the late Miss W. She ordered him to lay down the She ordered bim to Jay down th watch, and the fellow noticing her utiltude ad manner, very readily complied. She next ordered him to take the many from nhis packet, which he had extracted; he denied having taken any, when she gave a more peremptory urder, accompanied with suitable mayaments of a military nature, when he, thinking "discretion the hetter part of valor," produced the money and deposited it with the worth. She then gave him the passage and orders to march, which he readily obeyed.

On the return of her parents, measures were taken (which proved successful) and the fellow, after being caught, was speedly brought to trial, fully identified, convicted, and sentenced to the State Prison, and the Court caused to be presented to the young lady a testimonial in the form of a beautiful pin, with a suitable inscription.

A short time after this, the same young lady was at home alone as before and her parents not returning at dark, she took the precaution to fasten the nuter thoor. She had not long done so, when she brand a knock, but before exposing herself to dan-Respectfulli Has-Ben Double-yow Pursey."
